Yet another article attempting to bolster the perception that single life is awful (Oct 19). Single life doesn't have to be awful if your attitude to it is positive. I run SaRO Singles Network. We celebrate single life and aim to counter that stereotype so often put out by the media that all singles are sad, lonely and desperate. In just a couple of years we have garnered around 700 people on our mailing list – people who don't see themselves as that tired old stereotype.
